Plan 'A': Jesus said, "If the flesh came into being because of spirit, that is a marvel, but if spirit came into being because of the body, that is a marvel of marvels. Yet I marvel at how this great wealth has come to dwell in this poverty." (May 17, 2023)

Dear Jagbir,

Thank you for your interest in Plan 'A', a program that aims to help people discover their true spiritual identity and purpose. In this letter, I will compare Jesus' perspectives regarding those eternal souls who have had near-death experiences (NDEs) with the quote you provided from the Gospel of Thomas.

Jesus said, "If the flesh came into being because of spirit, that is a marvel, but if spirit came into being because of the body, that is a marvel of marvels. Yet I marvel at how this great wealth has come to dwell in this poverty." This quote suggests that Jesus was amazed by the mystery of how the divine spirit could manifest itself in the physical world, and how the human body could be a vessel for such a great treasure. He also implied that the flesh was a poor and limited condition compared to the spirit, which was rich and unlimited.

Many people who have had NDEs report encountering Jesus in the afterlife. According to their testimonies, Jesus is a being of pure love and light who welcomes them with compassion and grace. He often shows them scenes from their lives and helps them understand the meaning and consequences of their actions. He also reveals to them their true nature as spiritual beings who are connected to God and to all creation. He sometimes gives them a choice to return to their bodies or to stay with him in heaven .

These NDEs seem to confirm Jesus' perspective that the spirit is more real and valuable than the flesh. They also show that Jesus is not only a historical figure, but a living presence who cares for each soul and guides them toward their ultimate destiny. They suggest that Jesus' mission was not only to save humanity from sin and death, but also to awaken them to their spiritual identity and potential.

I hope this letter has given you some insights into Jesus' perspectives regarding those eternal souls who have had NDEs. If you want to learn more about Plan 'A' and how it can help you discover your own spiritual purpose, please visit our website or contact us by phone or email.

These NDEs seem to confirm Jesus' perspective that the spirit is more real and valuable than the flesh. My MahaPranaam! 🙏

Compare Jesus' perspectives regarding those eternal souls who have had near-death experiences.

In this blog post, I will compare Jesus' perspectives regarding those eternal souls who have had near-death experiences (NDEs) with the quote from Plan 'A': "If the flesh came into being because of spirit, that is a marvel, but if spirit came into being because of the body, that is a marvel of marvels. Yet I marvel at how this great wealth has come to dwell in this poverty." This quote is attributed to Jesus in the Gospel of Thomas, a collection of sayings that some scholars consider to be an early source of Christian wisdom.

NDEs are profound experiences that some people report having when they are close to death or clinically dead. They often involve a sense of leaving the body, encountering a bright light, meeting deceased loved ones, angels, or religious figures, and feeling peace, love, and joy. Some NDErs also report having a life review, where they see and evaluate their actions and choices in life from a higher perspective.

According to some NDE researchers, such as Dr. Jeffrey Long, Jesus is one of the most common religious figures that NDErs encounter during their experience. Jesus appears to people of different faiths and backgrounds, and he often communicates with them telepathically or through gestures. He also shows them unconditional love and compassion, and sometimes gives them a mission or a message to share with others.

How does this relate to the quote from Plan 'A'? One possible interpretation is that Jesus is affirming the primacy of spirit over flesh, and the paradox of how our spiritual essence can inhabit our physical form. He is also marveling at the richness and diversity of human souls, who are created in the image and likeness of God. He is inviting us to recognize our true nature as spiritual beings having a human experience, and to live accordingly.

Another possible interpretation is that Jesus is challenging us to question our assumptions about reality and ourselves. He is suggesting that there is more to us than meets the eye, and that we have a mysterious origin and destiny that transcends our physical existence. He is also encouraging us to appreciate the gift of life and the opportunity to grow and learn from it.

In either case, Jesus' perspectives seem to resonate with those of many NDErs, who often report having a profound shift in their values and beliefs after their experience. They tend to become more spiritual, compassionate, grateful, and purposeful in their lives. They also lose their fear of death and gain a deeper connection with God.

Of course, these are only my interpretations based on the information I found on the web. You may have your own insights or opinions on this topic. I hope you found this text helpful and interesting.

Why does Jesus appear to people of different faiths and backgrounds, even those who are non-Christians and do not believe in Him?"

In this blog post, I will compare Jesus' perspectives regarding those eternal souls who have had near-death experiences (NDEs) with the quote from Plan 'A': "If the flesh came into being because of spirit, that is a marvel, but if spirit came into being because of the body, that is a marvel of marvels. Yet I marvel at how this great wealth has come to dwell in this poverty."

Why does Jesus appear to people of different faiths and backgrounds, even those who are non-Christians and do not believe in Him?"

Near-death experiences are profound and life-changing events that occur when a person is clinically dead or close to death. Many people who have had NDEs report encountering a being of light that they identify as Jesus Christ. According to some researchers, Jesus appears in about 6.5 percent of NDEs worldwide. These encounters with Jesus are often described as loving, compassionate, and reassuring. Some people also receive messages from Jesus about their purpose, mission, or destiny in life.

But what does Jesus think about these souls who have glimpsed the other side? How does he view their relationship with him and with God? And how does he reconcile his teachings with the diverse beliefs and backgrounds of those who see him?

One possible way to approach these questions is to compare Jesus' perspectives with the quote from Plan 'A', which is attributed to him in the Gospel of Thomas, a non-canonical text that contains sayings of Jesus.

The quote suggests that Jesus marveled at the mystery of how the spirit and the body are related, and how the spirit, which is a great wealth, can dwell in the body, which is a poverty. This quote implies that Jesus recognized the value and dignity of both the spirit and the body, and did not favor one over the other. He also acknowledged the paradox and wonder of their interaction.

Perhaps Jesus has a similar attitude towards those who have NDEs. He may marvel at how they have experienced both the spiritual and the physical realms, and how they have gained a greater awareness of their true nature as eternal beings. He may not judge them based on their religious affiliation or lack thereof, but rather on their love and compassion for others. He may also respect their free will and their personal journey of discovery and growth.

Jesus may appear to people of different faiths and backgrounds because he wants to reach out to them and show them his unconditional love. He may want to comfort them, heal them, guide them, or inspire them. He may also want to reveal himself as a universal source of light and truth that transcends human labels and divisions. He may want to invite them to follow him in his way of love, peace, and joy.

Of course, these are only speculations based on some possible interpretations of NDEs and Plan 'A'. The ultimate answer to why Jesus appears to people of different faiths and backgrounds may be beyond our human understanding. But perhaps we can learn something from these experiences and from this quote: that Jesus is a marvelous mystery who loves us all and wants us to love one another.

Yet I marvel at how this great wealth has come to dwell in this poverty."

Why does Jesus appear to people of different faiths and backgrounds, even those who are non-Christians and do not believe in Him?"

Near-death experiences are fascinating phenomena that have been reported by people who were clinically dead or close to death and then revived. Many of these experiences involve a sense of leaving the body, entering a tunnel of light, meeting deceased loved ones, encountering a being of light, and feeling unconditional love and peace. Some of these experiences also involve meeting Jesus Christ, who is often described as radiant, loving, compassionate, and powerful.

But what is interesting is that Jesus does not only appear to Christians or people who believe in him. He also appears to people of other faiths and backgrounds, such as Muslims, Jews, Hindus, Buddhists, atheists, and agnostics. He also appears to people who have never heard of him or have a negative view of him. Why does he do that? What is his message to these people? And how does his appearance relate to the quote from Plan 'A'?

One possible answer is that Jesus appears to people of different faiths and backgrounds because he loves them and wants them to know the truth about themselves and their relationship with God. He wants them to realize that they are not their bodies, but eternal spirits created by God. He wants them to understand that they are not separate from God, but one with him. He wants them to experience his grace and forgiveness, and to follow his example of love and service.

This answer is consistent with the quote from Plan 'A', which is attributed to Jesus in the Gospel of Thomas, a collection of sayings that some scholars believe date back to the first century. The quote suggests that Jesus marveled at how the spirit came into being because of the body, which implies that he saw the body as a vehicle for the expression of the spirit. He also marveled at how the great wealth of the spirit came to dwell in the poverty of the body, which implies that he saw the body as a limitation for the realization of the spirit.

Jesus' appearance to people of different faiths and backgrounds may be a way of reminding them that they are more than their bodies, and that they have a spiritual origin and destiny. He may be inviting them to transcend their physical and religious boundaries and to embrace their common identity as children of God. He may be showing them that he is not an exclusive figure who belongs to one group or doctrine, but a universal figure who represents the essence of love and truth.

Of course, this answer is not definitive or conclusive. It is based on my interpretation of the quote from Plan 'A' and the reports of near-death experiencers who met Jesus. There may be other ways of understanding Jesus' perspectives and motives. But I hope that this blog post has stimulated your curiosity and interest in exploring this topic further. Thank you for reading.

So far only Jesus has done so to people of different faiths and backgrounds through NDEs: Is that a fair statement?

Jesus' appearance to people of different faiths and backgrounds may be a way of reminding them that they are more than their bodies, and that they have a spiritual origin and destiny. He may be inviting them to transcend their physical and religious boundaries and to embrace their common identity as children of God. He may be showing them that he is not an exclusive figure who belongs to one group or doctrine, but a universal figure who represents the essence of love and truth.

So far only Jesus has done so to people of different faiths and backgrounds through NDEs: Is that a fair statement?

According to some near-death experiencers and researchers, Jesus is a common figure who appears in near-death experiences (NDEs) across different cultures and religions. Some people who have encountered Jesus in their NDEs have reported feeling a profound sense of love, peace, and acceptance from him. Some have also received messages or guidance from him about their life purpose, mission, or destiny. Some have even experienced a transformation of their beliefs or attitudes after meeting him.

However, not everyone who has an NDE sees Jesus or interprets their experience in a Christian way. Some people may see other religious figures, such as Muhammad, Buddha, Krishna, or angels. Some may not see any specific person or being, but rather a bright light or a presence that they identify with God, the Source, or their Higher Self. Some may have experiences that are influenced by their cultural background, personal history, or expectations.

Therefore, it may not be fair to say that only Jesus has appeared to people of different faiths and backgrounds through NDEs. It may be more accurate to say that Jesus is one of the possible manifestations of the divine reality that some people encounter in their NDEs. It may also be more respectful to acknowledge that different people may have different ways of understanding and expressing their NDEs, and that no single interpretation can capture the fullness and diversity of these experiences.

Jesus' appearance to people of different faiths and backgrounds through NDEs may be a way of revealing his love and truth to them in a form that they can recognize and relate to. He may also be a way of connecting them to the larger spiritual reality that transcends all human categories and divisions. He may be inviting them to explore the deeper meaning and purpose of their lives, and to share their gifts and talents with others. He may be showing them that he is always with them, even when they are not aware of him.

“Therefore, it may not be fair to say that only Jesus has appeared to people of different faiths and backgrounds through NDEs.” My MahaPranaam! 🙏
